Re: Singh v. Bank of America, et al.; Case No. 13-01125-RAJ

Dear Judge Jones:

I write regarding the Order entered by the Court today, August 16, 2013, dealing with the pending Motion to Dismiss. I wanted the Court to know that I am embarrassed by the calendaring errors which occurred in my office and I have taken steps to make sure that it does not happen again – no matter how busy the office becomes. But I also wanted the Court to know that I have had previous experiences with the U.S. District Court whereby some judges have chastised myself and opposing counsel for trying to submit a stipulation and proposed order which changes deadlines required under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Because of these past experiences, I did not contact my opposing counsel to try to get this matter resolved and this imposed further burdens upon the Court, which I regret. I will bear your order in mind and will use the same strategies that I would use in state court litigation in the future – in the event of a scheduling problem, contact opposing counsel to see if we can resolve the matter between us before turning to the Court for resolution.

I apologize again for my mistakes. I take full responsibility for them and will do everything in my power to make certain that nothing like this happens again in this case or any other.

Very truly yours,
